LIMITED LIABILITY. LESS IMPORTANT THESE DAYS?

by Tim Corfield

With the new rules on dividends for shareholders the tax advantages for a limited company may have become more marginal. Has limited liability become less important?

NO! I'd say limited liability is far more important these days! It's critical not to confuse tax advantages (and disadvantages) of a limited company against those of an unincorporated business together with the overall business risk that any business faces.

Take Julian. He opened a beauty salon around five years ago that traded successfully for the first three years. The services that the business offered included nail extensions, eyelashes, spray tans, sunbeds, weight loss techniques, laser treatment (skin rejuvenation), hair removal and suchlike. He employed two qualified, competent therapists. Around a year ago he received a claim letter from solicitors on behalf of a former customer alleging that treatment applied had caused facial burning to the customer. The solicitors, on a no-win no fee agreement, claimed £25,000 in damages. Julian believed the claim to be contrived but his lawyers advised him that the case would cost at least £15,000 to defend and there was a good chance he would lose the case because relevant paperwork was missing.

Was the business incorporated?

Fortunately, yes. Julian had other business interests and he decided to focus on these going forward.

The company was liquidated and I'm pleased to say Julian or his company never heard from those lawyers again.

In today's economy customers or clients are far more likely to complain and seek compensation through lawyers who are only too pleased to help. As advisers to business owners we always have to be prudent to limit any exposure to risk.

I don't think there are many businesses that are risk free.

WORK LONGER AND LIVE LONGER. IT'S OFFICIAL!

For people who carry on work into their 60's – some good news!

Actuaries have recently reported that a man retiring at 70 rather than 60 added another 13 months to his life expectancy. For women it's around 12 months. This is even after taking into account differences in health, wealth and lifestyle.

That's good news for all of us that have seen our pension funds seriously depleted over the last few years. With the recent abolition of the default retirement age of 65 this means that more people who want to work longer, now can.

Even shorter periods of work beyond 60 significantly improve life expectancy. Men who retire at 65 rather than 60 live an average of 7.5 months longer.

The exact reasons for this bonus is not entirely clear. Continued physical and mental activity in later life has proven health benefits and the discipline of work helps us remain active and mentally alert.

HOW CAN G&K SUPPORT YOUR PRACTICE?

by Tim Corfield

Accountants often say to me 'I'm not sure what to say to a client when his business enters the murky and mysterious world of insolvency - it's not something I'm used to dealing with.'

'How do I know my company is insolvent' ...'should I continue to trade' ...'can my company keep taking credit off suppliers'...'can I repay my directors' loan account?'

These are tricky questions - and we all know what a client will say when challenged over a transaction - 'that's what my accountant told me to do!'

That's where we can help. We're pleased to offer free insolvency help to your practice.

So, if you'd like to chat through a point over the telephone or have a meeting either with or without your client to discuss a case then call us. Any meetings would be arranged at a time (today if necessary!) and place convenient to you and your client.

We'll answer any questions your client or you have and help plan the way ahead. Call us now!

'Droit au but' – as they say in Marseille!

Fantastic Experience! Regrettably poor result for England 🙄

James Corfield and his friends did not quite get the day that they had expected. They had planned it for six months and had hoped for a great day out with an England win. Unfortunately neither happened!

Even though the day was difficult and, at times, they were worried they would not even get to see the game, the day ended up being a success. It's a shame they can't say that about England's performance in the tournament!
